

Summit League Members Steve and Anna Mae Zeinemann Give Back in More Ways Than One

If Summit League member Steve Zeinemann had never stepped inside the Salvation Army or Tyler's Home for Kids, his life would look a lot different than it does today.

He probably wouldn't be a Summit League member. He wouldn't be as involved with United Way as he is now, and he wouldn't be spending a good chunk of his time volunteering in the community with nonprofits that support our bold goal.

But, he did get a glimpse inside those walls...and it was eye-opening.

"Wow, it really hit home," Steve said. The bus tour was part of the 1995 campaign kickoff.

"I saw what these nonprofits and organizations were doing. I saw the need. If I hadn't, I don't know how much of an impact I would have made."

From that point on, Steve knew he wanted to be more involved with United Way and volunteering in the community.

"It just kind of grew from there and kept on going," he said of that fateful day.

Learning to Give Back

Steve was already predisposed to a helping lifestyle. He remembers from a young age both of his parents stepping up to help when asked by others.

"I don't ever remember my parents saying 'no' when someone asked them for help. My parents weren't extremely wealthy but felt it was important to help whenever they were asked," he said.

Steve and his wife Anna Mae are combined donors, and both have been giving through their workplace campaign since the early 1970s when they were introduced to United Way. But since both recently retired, they've taken their support one step further through volunteerism.

Steve retired in December 2022 and Anna Mae retired in April 2021.

Both spent the majority of their careers working for Wausau Insurance. In fact, that's where they met.

The couple recently celebrated their 39th wedding anniversary.

A Move to the Golden State

In 1993, while still working for Wausau Insurance, the couple moved to California for two years. Upon their return, both Steve and Anna Mae continued their support of United Way through their workplace campaign and started getting more involved with volunteering. The more they volunteered, the more they realized the need that was out there, and the impact they could have.

They kept increasing their donation every year by 10 percent. "That's how we got to the Summit League level," he said.

When the couple moved back to Wisconsin in 1995, he was asked to be a member of the Campaign Cabinet. That was the year the campaign kicked off with the eye-opening bus tour of nonprofits.

Life After Retirement

Since retiring Steve has been a member of United Way's affinity group Retire United as well as a member of the United Way board and a member of the Individual Giving Subcommittee.

As a member of Retire United, Steve and Anna Mae attended a tour of the Community Partners Campus (CPC) where multiple nonprofits are housed.

"It was pretty obvious that this was the place we wanted to volunteer with," he said.

Steve and Anna Mae currently spend every Monday afternoon at The Neighbors' Place helping guests shop in the Market.

"United Way's bold goal to lift 10,000 community members to financial stability...this gives us an opportunity to help there and work towards that goal," he said.

Steve is also on the board of directors for Habitat for Humanity and Anna Mae is very involved with their church.

A Message to Summit League Members

Being a Summit League member isn't just about giving monetary donations – it's about understanding what those funds can actually do to improve the community.

They encourage others to see firsthand the need in the community and realize the impact they can have as Summit League members. For Steve, it all started with a community bus tour.
